Nestled atop a hill in Columbia's sought-after Shandon neighborhood, this beautifully maintained home offers the perfect blend of historic charm and modern convenience. Located within walking or biking distance to shopping, dining, Emily Douglas Park, and the University of South Carolina, this is a prime spot to live and work in a vibrant college town. The light-filled kitchen features stainless steel appliances, a gas range with double ovens, and an inviting eat-in area. Historic architectural details such as hardwood flooring, heavy moldings, built-in shelving, a curved staircase, and arched entryways add timeless appeal. Upstairs, bedrooms have ample space, with the primary bedroom including a bonus room ideal for a home office, dressing room, or reading nook. The home also features formal living and dining rooms, a bright sunroom, and usable basement space. Decorated bathrooms throughout complement the home's original character. Outside a shaded, fenced backyard with a private patio is the perfect for outdoor entertaining and relaxing. A true gem in one of Columbia's most cherished neighborhoods, this home delivers charm, space, and location all in one.
